Lease Changes Considered For Lake Park Concession

by Al Skolnik

With only three councilmen present for the regular business part of the October 6 meeting, most of the agenda items were deferred until the next city council meeting on Monday, October 20. Councilman Dick Pilski left early because of illness and councilman Charles Schwan was out of town on personal business.

The council, however, did decide not to make Parkway a one-way street, but instead voted to erect appropriate signs alerting drivers to exercise caution and to place a stop sign at the Co-op parking lot exit onto Parkway. It was thought that these steps would help to reduce the hazard to children playing in the area.

The council by a 2-1 vote (Mayor Gil Weidenfeld opposed) also moved to suggest to the local liquor license board that it consider the fact that Beltway Plaza merchants have been having economic difficulties before granting another liquor license to an eating place along Greenbelt Road west of Cherrywood Lane. The application will be coming up before the board on Thursday, October 16. Weidenfeld did not feel council should place itself in the position of favoring one business over another.

The council decided not to take a position on the application for rezoning of the Cipriano property from R-R (Rural-Residential) to R-T (Townhouse), because it is not located within Greenbelt's corporate limits and the requested zoning is in keeping with the character of the surrounding neighborhood.

Lake Park Concession

The council had an extended discussion on the request of Mr. and Mrs. Duane Bowman for extension of their lease for the concession stand Gunner's Mate at the Lake Park. Opposition to the concession was expressed by Lakeside Civic Association representatives George Loutsch and Joseph Muller. Both argued that the concession stand and particularly the boat and bike rental activities were a source of attraction for out-of-town residents. This, in turn, they stated, created litter, noise, denuding of the turf, and additional expense to the city.

"Let us restore the park to its natural state," was their plea, "so that peace and tranquility could prevail again in that area." They made it clear that they were not critical of the Bowmans, but simply felt that the concession stand and rentals were out of place in Greenbelt.

Another Lakeside resident, Werner Neupert, did not go so far as to advocate terminating the concession stand, but favored tightening up of controls and guidelines so as to minimize the high-density traffic at the lake.

Council in general seemed reluctant to do away with the concession stand since it benefited many people in other parts of town. City manager James Giese said that a survey of the users of the boat rentals indicated that 65 percent were Greenbelt residents.

Giese suggested that if the council extends the lease, it consider the following conditions:

- restricting the scope of operations
- limiting the size of the concession stand
- increasing the payment to the city, as well as the concessionaire paying for telephone, electricity, water, and sewer. At present, the city receives 1 1/2 percent of gross receipts at the concession stand.
- improving the building's appearance
- having the lease period run concurrently with the lease for the swimming pool concession, which the Bowmans also operate. Council deferred the matter until the next meeting.

Retirement Ordinance

Council introduced for first reading an ordinance which would bring the city's personnel regulations into conformance with those of the State Retirement System which permit continued employment beyond the mandatory retirement age of 70. The city manager and city council would decide on an individual basis, whether or not to continue a classified employee beyond the mandatory age of 70.

Also introduced for first reading was a resolution accepting into the city street system Maplewood court, Olivewood court, Pinecrest court and Lakeside Drive. This matter had been pending for 8 years as the city up to now had refused to accept the streets because of problems when the streets were first constructed for the Lakeside subdivision. Corrective action from the developer and the bonding company was not forthcoming, and the city solicitor has now advised that it is not worth the city's legal expense to pursue the matter. In order for the city to perform maintenance on the roads, the streets must be accepted into the city road system.

Other Matters

Council will be meeting next week in a work session to decide, among other things, how to proceed in selecting a site for the housing for the elderly project . . . Leonard Modzelewski is leaving the Park and Recreation Advisory Board . . . The city has put in orders for bulletproof vests for policemen . . . Ray Krasnick of Springhill Lake has informed council of the possible loss of Little League baseball field because of proposed expansion of SHL elementary school next spring . . . Of 423 items that were referred to council during the 1973-75 term for action, only 26 were still pending at the close of the term . . . Soil Conservation experts are making plans to examine the flooding conditions caused by springs in the Lakewood area and to make recommendations as to possible remedies.

Disaster Assistance Center Open at Greenbelt Armory

Hal Silvers, Civil Defense Director for Prince Georges County, announced that a "one stop" disaster assistance center has been set up in Greenbelt Armory, Greenbelt Rd. chosen because of its central location. The center opened Tuesday, October 9 at noon and will continue to operate from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. daily, including Saturday as long as needed.

Assistance is available to individuals who were recent victims of flooding and damage done by hurricane Eloise. Under the federal program such assistance may include: 1.) temporary housing, 2) repairs to owner-occupied residences, 3) temporary assistance with mortgage or rental payments, 4) unemployment assistance or job placement for those unemployed as a result of the disaster, 5) disaster loans to individuals or businesses at low interest rates and 5) individual or family grants up to $5,000 to meet disaster related expenses.

Congresswoman Gladys Spellman, who had telegraphed President Ford urging emergency aid for victims of Eloise urged every individual who was affected by the flood to come to the disaster assistance center to seek help. "It is vital that people realize that there are many programs available to help them," said Mrs. Spellman. She noted that 45 county homes were destroyed by the flood and more than 1,000 damaged.

County housing officials have found that Prince Georges County, especially the Laurel area, was harder hit than any county in the state. Although there were no fatalities or injuries, an estimated 2500 county residents had to be evacuated.

Greenbelt Citizens Complain About Police Procedures

by Elaine and Al Skolnik

"You can do your job and still be loved" was the message an upset parent gave the Greenbelt Police Department as more than 80 teenagers and adults crowded into the council chambers on Monday night to voice their complaints about police tactics. Complaints ranged from the alleged use of abusive language to physical manhandling and it was 10:30 p.m. before Mayor Gil Weidenfeld called a halt.

The audience was orderly, though obviously upset at what they felt was unfair treatment by the police. But most of the speakers emphasized that they were not critical of the entire police force. In fact, several Greenbelt officers were singled out for praise. "We have a lot of good officers," said one complainer, "you know them when you see the kids trailing after them."

Both council and city manager James Giese stressed that they would not comment upon specific incidents since they did not have all the facts. Giese said that it has been his experience that there are usually two sides to every story in matters of this nature. However, he promised that he would investigate every charge "to the extent I can." He further stated that his door is open to anyone who has a complaint.

Citizen Review Board?

Many persons expressed as much concern over the apparent lack of channels through which complaints could be registered as over the charges themselves. Several persons complained of the difficulty they had in getting to meet with Police Chief William Lane and of the unresponsiveness of the department to complaints. Others felt that any investigation by the police department was bound to be prejudiced in favor of the officers, and called for an impartial citizen review board to hear complaints. Others felt that Greenbelt CARES might play a helpful role in handling certain cases before going to court.

Giese noted that a State law prohibits any actions against an officer for police brutality except on the basis of a formal investigation and hearing at which testimony is taken under oath. The hearing is conducted by a 3-member board composed of police.

Council, obviously disturbed over the lack of a communication funnel, between the citizenry and the police chief, readily agreed to charge the Community Relations Advisory Board (CRAB) with the task of investigating the situation and advising the council as to how complaints can best be handled, including the possibility of setting up an independent citizen review board. Giese and city solicitor Emmett Nanna were also directed to investigate the possibility of setting up such a review board and its legal ramifications.

Complaints

A major source of dissatisfaction involved alleged harassment by the police. Several teenagers complained that they were repetitively accosted especially when driving and ticketed for all kinds of minor infractions. Others expressed reluctance to complain because of fear of retaliation. Several young girls complained of the abusive language used by certain policemen.

Another area of concern was alleged physical manhandling by certain police officers. Several parents, while not excusing their children's actions, said that the types of crimes charged did not justify the treatment sometimes accorded, such as handcuffing and frisking the suspect.

Others complained of the lack of clearcut, publicly-known police procedures and felt that police policies were often set at the moment to fit the occasion. One mother wanted to know whether it was general policy to prohibit a parent from accompanying her arrested teenager into the back of the police station. Also whether it was general policy to put teenagers into the "cage" even if not unruly.

Other complaints centered around the arbitrary way in which some laws were enforced, such as that dealing with buck knives.

Two young private citizens - Rick Ransom and Rick Barber - who grew up in Greenbelt offered their services to hear complaints and determine their merits if this would help to improve the dialogue between the young people and the police. Ransom said to the young people present, "I don't want you to think that this system does not work." Both he and Barber, who is on the board of CARES, welcomed calls at any time.

Mayor Weidenfeld ended the meeting on the same note. He told the audience that the council was honored to have people tell the council of their problems, "showing you have confidence in us." He said there was no way for the council to deal with the problems "unless we hear about them."

School Truancy Crackdown

The Prince George's County Public School System will implement firmer procedures regarding student absenteeism. The county police will stop and question people out of school who appear to be under 16 years old, as an agreement between the two systems. Students without proper verification will be returned to school and considered truant, and parents will be notified. Store managers are urged to call the police about loitering school-age children.

CITY STATEMENT ON POLICE DEPT.

At the October 6 Council meeting, a number of allegations concerning the conduct of some police officers were made by persons present. The City Council, rightfully, expressed its concern about these allegations and directed me to investigate these matters. Chief Lane and I share the concern of the Council.

In the 13 years I have been City Manager of Greenbelt, the Police Department has evolved from a force of 4 men to the present 19 man strength plus 4 civilian communication specialists. This growth was achieved primarily under the direction of Chief Lane, while at the same time the Department has also earned a growing reputation as a professionally respected and competent small law enforcement agency.

In the 1973 voter questionnaire, police protection was given the highest rating of any City departmental service. Preliminary data still being compiled for the 1975 questionnaire indicates continued voter support.

While there are many factors that resulted in the City having a reduced crime rate in 1974 at a time when other jurisdictions experienced sharply increased crime rates, the Police Department certainly is entitled to share in the credit for this significant accomplishment.

The Police Department can only maintain its reputation for effective law enforcement if all of its members maintain the high level of professional performance demanded from modern day police personnel. When it is determined that individual persons employed as police officers fail to meet these standards, appropriate corrective action will be taken.

At the same time, any police officer, as well as any other citizen, is entitled to a complete investigation of all information relevant to an allegation and an impartial hearing prior to judgment being rendered.

It is our intention to investigate all allegations completely and thoroughly in order to determine all facts pertaining to any incident. If the facts indicate the need for action being taken against an officer, the action will be taken. If, however, the facts indicate that an allegation is unfounded, every effort shall be made to rectify the damage done by the making of an unfounded allegation.

Procedures to be instituted to investigate the allegations which have been made will be announced later. In the meantime, any person who wishes to make a complaint concerning the conduct of the Police Department or an individual member of that Department may do so by contacting myself, Chief Lane, Assistant City Manager Dennis Piendak, the Greenbelt City Council or an individual member of the Council.
